

Striking New Red Cross Poster

American Red Cross

Riveting the attention of the beholder on the fact that the American Red Cross is chartered by Congress as an official volunteer relief organization the dome of the Capitol at Washington, upon which is superimposed a large Red Cross, is the central figure of a new poster for the Annual Red Cross Roll Call. The poster, which has been pronounced one of the most striking of innumerable representations of the famous dome, is the work of Franklin Booth, a New York artist of wide renown. It will be displayed throughout the country during the Roll Call period, Armistice Day to Thanksgiving, when the Red Cross membership for 1923 will be enrolled.

Ed Berry of Caruthersville was in Hayti Thursday in the interest of his automobile business. Dock Sorrell of Faust was in town Friday afternoon seeing after some business matters.

$700,000 SPENT BY RED CROSS IN SOUTHWESTERN DIVISION IN A YEAR

Money Was Used in Relief and Rehabilitation Following Disasters in the District.

During the fiscal year 1921-22, ending June 30th, the Southwestern Division, American Red Cross expended $730,936.79 in disaster relief. Part of this came from the National Red Cross funds secured from memberships, part from chapters and parts from individual contributions. This money was expended in disasters in various parts of the division, especially in the flood areas along the west bank of the Mississippi, in Missouri and Arkansas, in Texas, around Fort Worth, and in the Rio Grande Valley, at Burlington, Kan., and at Pueblo, Colo.

The greatest amount of time and effort in any of these disasters went into the rehabilitation of Pueblo and of the district covered by the Rio Grande Valley flood of last June, according to a report from the Southwestern Division, American Red Cross, in St. Louis. Fifteen hundred and ten families were affected by that flood. The manner in which the Red Cross undertakes these disasters depends upon the conditions to be met. In some cases the local chapters and citizens' committees take charge and the division office goes in an advisory capacity. In others the situation is reversed, and in still others the work is handled jointly by the Red Cross and the citizens.

Relief work in the Rio Grande Valley flood, which was the last disaster of real importance in the division, has been practically closed and the auditing committee, as well as the advisory committee, with the Red Cross director, Henry M. Baker, are compiling their reports, to be submitted to the citizens and to the division. The wide area affected in this disaster has caused the work to be continued longer than would have been necessary. It is believed, but that it has been thoroughly done and has created friendship for the Red Cross among the citizens of the section is evidenced by the letters received at the division office.

MISSOURIANS MAKING QUANTITIES OF WINE

Jefferson City, Mo., October 17.—The scarcity of empty barrels and kegs some weeks ago in this part of the state is now fully explained. A great many people have been engaged in gathering the large crop of wild grapes and making homemade wine for winter use. Along the streams in the central part of the state wild grapes grow in immense quantities, and in the past the people left them to the birds and small wild animals fond of such food. Here and there someone would gather a small quantity for making wine, and, although wine made from wild grapes was always said to be of excellent quality, very few cared to go to the trouble of getting their wine in that way. Moreover, with the exception of a few counties, Missouri has never been much on using wine of any kind, a majority of those with a leaning to alcoholic drinks preferring something else.

Early this fall a great many people in this part of the state, including those living in the cities, decided to make their own wine. Wild grapes cost nothing but the picking, and usually large quantities of them went to waste. There was a rush for kegs and barrels early in the season suitable for holding wine, and in a very short time the supply was entirely exhausted, something that has never happened in the past. All kinds of vessels were pressed into service, and dealers sent for large shipments of empty barrels and kegs direct to the manufacturers.

Presumably the trade has been supplied, and for once few of these grapes will go to waste. The birds and little wild animals may be short on this kind of feed, but the men who have discovered a consuming thirst for wild-grape wine will have their appetites satisfied, and at a very small cost. Some of these grapes are to be found in the tops of tall trees, and these have been left for the birds and animals, but for the most part they are to be found near the streams or lakes, on bushes and can be reached without a great deal of trouble.

What the attitude of the prohibition enforcement officers will be towards this new method of evading prohibition is not known at the present time. Perhaps they are waiting until the wine ferments and becomes palatable. At present there is no sort of doubt that they have much more than they can do in trying to make life a burden to the bootleggers and moonshiners in this part of the State, few of whom have come under the heel of the law. It is said that those who have provided themselves with large quantities of wild grape wine will not engage in the bootlegging business, although it is believed that the wine product will be vastly superior to the coffin varnish the bootleggers handle at great profit and little risk.

FAMOUS LAST WORDS

"I wonder if it's loaded. I'll look down the barrel and see."

"Look at this wire hanging down into the street. I'll throw it to one side."

"I wonder how much electricity these wires carry. I'll touch one and find out."

"I wonder whether this rope will hold my weight."

Which one of these is the third rail, anyway?

"Listen! That's the interurban whistle. Step on the accelerator and we'll beat it across."

"It's no fun swimming here. I'm going out beyond the life lines."

"I've never driven a car in traffic before. But they say it's perfectly simple."

What's the Use? Many a man has managed to live ninety years and then be forgotten in a week.
